CONNECTICUT'S SPOTLESS TOWN The readers of The Bulletin do not know which town of Connecticut's 168 this is! It isn't of them yet, but it is gestion along Fifty-ninth street and going to be, if the New Haven Journal-Courier has its foresight properly focussed, and it is going to be "the Elm city," our famous college town, the Hudson as well as the East river The civic federation representatives in New Haven have an outdoor cleaning campaign well in hand and before will resemble even more nearly than Easter Sunday they hope to point now a mole; unless, indeed, enough Easter Sunday they hope to point with pride at their spotless town, as the users of the vacuum sweepers are this year pointing with pleasure at their dustless houses. The Journal-Courier says apropos of this cam-

RECALCITRANT REPUBLICANS. It is becoming more and more apparent why the political leaders in Washington were for postponing tariff revision; and the way in the Payne tariff bill is being abused in the house by its own party foreshadows the difficulty of getting a measure that will be fair to all industries and to all sections of the coun-

The president is annoyed by the sit-nation and has held a conference with the republican leaders in the house to be told that they were doing all in their power to expedite the naideration of the bill. They suggested that, in view of the disaffection in the republican ranks, he could probably assist them greatly by reasoning with recalcitrant republicans who place their individual fortunes above the interests of their party and who refuse, in some instances, to vote for a rule or to enter a party caucus. These republicans who are blocking the wheels of progress from personal or private rather than public interests -who are proving to be false to the people and their party-are the ones who should be retired for better and truer men. The country has too many of this sort in its service at Wash-

EVIDENCE OF TRUE LOVE. By the advice of an observing bish-

ep, a newspaper reporter who doubtof the existence of true love was adrised to consult the records of our penitentiaries and answer the question for himself; and he did so to find that seventy-five per cent, of the wives of prisoners who are committed remain faithful to them through their terms of service, and rejoin them when the convicts leave the prison to begin life

And upon this he wrote: "Lovenot the love of 'Three Weeks'-the love that gives you a picture of a woman, bowed with years and hardship, tested by sorrow, burned by disgrace-isn't dead yet, when these figures can be true."

This is highly creditable to the fidelity and self-sacrificing spirit of woman; but while he was about it he might have seen what per cent, of the "tested by sorrow and burned by disgrace" had made the same record to see if true love was abiding with all the people. It is not the prison which makes manifest that love is true and long-suffering, but the homes -the homes which know the ceaseless grind of labor and the burden of unsatisfied needs where sickness means distress and where attempt at progress means self-denial. True love doesn't need "to be burned by disgrace" to prove its quality, for it hines more radiantly when tried by misfortune and tested by virtue. If leve true and holy did not exist in homes of the land, any other evi- it used to be. dence of its existence would be nul

THE LOST BOYS.

What makes kidnapping a crime worse than murder is the suspense which it causes the parents and the rebbery of the child of both its birthright and its identity.

A more thorough search was never made than was made for the lost Charile Ross, and many believe the story that he was found eighteen years later in the dock of a criminal court in Boston, a degenerate because of the wrongs which had been done him. He has never been found, but a brakeman of Pittsburg, who apparently loves notoriety, rises up to eay that he believes that he is Charife Ross, but he cannot make the world believe it. The jast claimant before this was a wounded burglar in New York, who gasped tariff and that the democrats know out a few incoherent words, which were thought to be a "clue," but like all others, this led to no result. There was probably not a police chief in America thirty years ago who had not

CHILD'S COAT. Paris Pattern No. 2821 - All Seams

A charming little all-over coat is here portrayed, developed in fine coverication and siltched with brown silk. The double-breasted front is shaped and fastened with large nearl buttons and the loose box back falls straight from the shoulders. The shawl collar, pointed at the front, is of the material, the edge simply siltched. The full-length sleeves are finished with turnback cuffs of the material, stitched to match the collar. The side seams are split up for a few inches from the lower edge. In dark blue or dark red serge, slitched with black, it is an excellent model for everyday wear.

The pattern is in four sizes—1 to 7 years. For a child of 3 years the cost requires 2% yards of material 27 inches wide. It yards 35 inches wide or 1% yards 55 inches wide or 1% yards 55 inches wide.

Price of pattern, 10 cents.
